Exaggerated reports of the wondrous fertility of the land were readily believed and were not easily contradicted, for only very lew people had that intimate knowledge of the country upon which to base successful contradiction. So when the rish was made to day the boomers believed they were entering into a veritable Garden of Eden.

When they had reached their claims and had staked them off, and had taken the opportunity to survey their broad acres, they found that instead of a Garden of Eden, a promised land flowing with milk and honey, as they had fondly believed, they had really possessed themselves of a section of very ordinary Western prairie land, flowing with nothing but high grass and very brackish streams bitter with sikall.
